Rogers Denies Russian Deal On Mining N. Vietnam Ports

WASHINGTON, May 19 (AP).

Secretary of State William P.
Rogers today denied that the United States had made a secret deal with the Soviet Union on the mining of the North Vietnamese ports.

Responding to a question on the mildness of the Soviet reaction to the U.S. mining operation, Mr. Rogers told a news conference: "I can categorically say there were no secret agreements along those lines."

He fold newsmen on the eve of his departure for the Moscow summit talks that he would not wish to speculate about what can be accomplished in bringing the Vietnam war to an end through the Moscow talks.

But White House sources have made it known that better relations between the United States and the Soviet Union will depend almost entirely on the willingness of Hanot to agree to some kind of compromise settlement of the war. The Soviet Union will ba asked to exert its influence.

The secretary of state reported that the Nixon administration is encouraged by recent military developments in South Vietnam. "The South Vietnamese are fighting courageously." he said.

He strongly urged that Congress defer its criticism of the President's war policies at least until the presidential election campaign starts this summer. He sed hope that "no action will be taken that will undercut President Nixon's position." He was obviously referring to moves that would halt further appropriations for the Vietnam war provided that North Vietnam accepts a cease-fire and withdrawal of American forces by a fixed date. Mr. Rogers also praised West Germany's approval of nonaggression treaties with the Soviet Union and Poland. He said the question of a European security conference will brought up in President Nixon's meeting with Soviet chiefs.

The Communist powers have long sought an East-West conference on European security, but Washington has favored a cautious approach to such a con-ference pending further indication of what useful results might come from it.

Mr. Rogers saw as "a related subject" the Western proposition negotiations on mutual balanced force reductions in Europe. He said the European questions would be discussed by him with allied leaders when he stops at the NATO ministerial meeting in Bonn on his return home from the Moscow parley.

WASHINGTON, May 19 (IHT). -A bomb exploded in a women's washroom in a top security area of the Pentagon early this morning and the radical Weatherman group claimed that it had set off the blast in honor of Ho Chi Minh's birthday and as a war

There were no injuries but water from broken pipes caused some damage to the Air Force computer center.

Minutes before the 1 a.m. explosion, two newspapers, The Washington Post and the New York Post, received calls warning that a bomb would go off shortly in the Pentagon. The callers identified themselves as members of the Weatherman radical protest group, which had also claimed responsibility for a similar blast at the U.S. Capitol on March 1, 1971.

The explosion reportedly blew out two interior walls in the fourth-floor rest room and sent torrents of water gushing down corridors and into offices on that floor and the floor below. The entire fourth floor is classified as a top security area. Brig. Gen. Daniel James, an assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, told newsmen that the water caused some damage to the wiring providing power for the Air Force computers. The computers were immediately shut down but Gen, James said, "The Air Force assures me they can function without them." Computers Shut Down

The compnters, which deal with Air Force logistics but are not involved with data on the war in Southeast Asia, were shut down for 7 1/2 hours and the Pentagon reported that no data

Bundesrat Approves Bonn Pacts

Brandt, Barzel Urge Elections

By David Binder BONN, May 19 (NYT).—The Bundesrat, Bonn's npper house, completed ratification of West Germany's controversial Eastern treaties today by letting them pass uncontested by the conservative opposition. Then Chancellor Willy Branch called on the opposition leader, Rainer Barzel, to avoid obstructionism in the deadlocked Bonn parliament and work with him for interim federal elections in

Mr. Barzel, replying to the challenge almost immediately, said he too was for new elections. But, like the chancellor, he voiced a reservation. Mr. Brandt said he would not resign until there was an ironclad agreement with the opposition on interim elections. Mr. Barzel said the chancellor should The talk of new elections was prompted by the deadlock that developed in the Bundestag, or lower house of parliament, over ratification of the 1970 goodwill treaties with the Soviet Union and Poland. The government coalition and the opposition are now tied 248-248.

As on Wednesday in the Bun-destag, the opposition in the Bundesrat today followed Mr. Barzel's recommendation to abstain. This let the treatles go through unscathed on the strength of the coalition government's Social Democratic and Free Democratio votes. [At the brief session starting at 9:30 a.m., the speaker merely asked whether any member wished the Bundesrat to raise an objection to the treaties. No member answered yes, which meant that the Christian Democrat-led oppo-rition, which holds a 21-20 edge in the upper house, had observed its pledge not to oppose the trea-

Signing Set for Tuesday

Next Tuesday, President Gustav Heinemann will sign the ratificathe bargain that was begun two years ago during negotiations in Moscow and Warsaw and opening the way for a series of East-West détente moves, including realization of the 1971 four-power Berlin agreement.

Mr. Barzel was plainly nettled by the new election challenge from Mr. Brandt and his Free Democratic coalition partner, Foreign Minister Walter Scheel.

"I had planned to go on a short holiday," he told a correspondent, "and now they throw this ball at me." He admitted, however, that he had been describing interim elections as "the most sympathetic solution" to the parliamentary deadlock. The 47-year-old leader is mindful of the poor impression his abstention policy made on the electorate and the popularity of the government's Eastern policy. He is also determined to reestablish the unity of his Christian Union alliance, badly shaken by the treaty question.

chairman of Cunard Line today called the bomb threat against the Queen Elizabeth 2 a confidence trick. Thorough searches of the ship in the mid-Atlantic turned up no bombs, he said. "Obviously, we feel much happier, but we are still continuing the search." Victor Matthews told a news conference.

A team of British bomb disposal experts parachuted into the ocean alongside the QE2 to search the ship yesterday after a man telephoned Cunard's New York office Wednesday and threatened to explode six bombs aboard the ship unless the company paid $350,-

Mr. Matthews said that the bomb disposal experts searched the 65,865-ton ship thoroughly during the night without finding anything and would continue their effort until the ship docks at Cherbourg, France, tomorrow at 2200 GMT.

In the news conference, Mr. Matthews indicated that tha 1,400 passengers and 900 crewmen aboard the ship had taken the threat in stride after being informed by the ship's master, Capt. William Law.

A couple from England com-mented that they had taken the ship to avoid being hijacked to Oubs if they took a plane.

Now, they said, they were on "ship-jacked" liner and they were not happy about it. Mr. Matthews said that the board, which thought the threat was a hoax, decided to pay the ransom because it felt it could take no chances with the safety of the passengers and crew. "I am convinced it was a con trick." Mr. Matthews said.

Mr. Matthewa said that Cunard has received several bomb threats in the past, when the ship was docked or empty, but this was the first one taken seriously.

Hanoi Repairing Cut Road Link

By Anthony Lewis

HANOI May 19 (NYT) .-Route 5, the road linking Hanol and Haiphong, was cut in the middle May 11 hy the bombing of a bridge at Haiduong: Drivers now have to make a detour that involves two river crossings.

Wednesday morning, crossings were made on small barge ferries, each carrying two trucks and two cars at a time. By Wednesday night, a pontoon bridge about 200 yards long had been completed at one crossing and at another a bridge was due to be completed yesterday morning. It was a dramatic example of how the North Vietnamese can get around bomb damage. It was seen in the course of trips to Haiphong and back to Hanci in a period of 15 hours Wednesday...

All along the road there was evidence of construction. Steam shovels and cranes, some brand new, were spotted. But most of the work was being done by hand. Route-5 is a narrow, two-lane road bounded by trees. Beyond the trees on each side, there is a deep ditch 10 to 15 yards wide filled with water. Mud Blocks

Workers-men and womenwere widening the road to four lanes. They did this by going into the ditch on one side and cutting mud blocks by hand with sharp instruments. The blocks were then piled into the ditch on the other side, filling it to the level of the bombing said that at 12:53 a.m. a security officer at the Pentagon received a phone call from the Washington police reporting that The Washington Post had informed them of the warning that a bomh had heen planted on the eighth floor of the Pentagon and would go off during the night. At 12:59 a.m., the Air Force security officer reported a loud explosion on the fourth floor. The Pentagon is only five stories high. Immediately afterward the hullding was searched but no other bombs were found. The Weatherman group that said it had set off the bomb is a splinter faction of the radical Students for a Democratic Society. It has claimed responsibility for a number of explosions in California and New York as well as the Capitol bombing.

The caller told the New York Post that a full statement outlining the reasons for the bombing could be found in a nearby telephone booth. In the booth a Post reporter found a six-page envelope tucked into an empty telephone bookbinder. It said, in part:

"Today we attacked the Pentagon, the center of the American military command. We are acting at a time when growing U.S. air and naval shellings are being carried out against the Vietnamese; while U.S. mines and warships are being used to block-ade the harbors of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam; while plans for even more escalation are being made in Washington."

Meanwhile, the Pentagon braced for planned mass demonstra-tions on Sunday and a possible attempt to shut down the roads ment headquarters on Monday.

The Sunday march was called by a coalition of anti-war groups to protest President Nixon's decision to mine the harbors of North Vietnam. Organizers predict that 100,000 people will demonstrate in what is planned as a nonviolent protest.

The Monday attempt to block access to the Pentagon was the work of the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice, the same group that was responsible for the unsuccessful attempt to tie up traific in Washington last year.

The riot was sparked by 36 IRA detainees who demanded they be treated as political prisoners. The members of the guerrilla army, fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland, overpowered guards and released other prisoners who joined in the rampage.

The rioters' demands grew to

When the security forces finally penetrated the prison, one security official described the scene as "a shambles."

Most of the IRA men involved in the riot are in prison awaiting trial on charges of illegally possessing arms.

Rory O'Brady, leader of Sinn Fein, political arm of the IRA, warned the government to meet the men's demands. O'Brady recalled that IRA detainees had died during hunger strikes in the past for euch demands and had gone naked for months rather than wear jail uniforms.

> But because of the mining of North Vietnamese harbors and heavy air strikes on transportation lines, Mr. Agnew said, the North Vietnamese capability for an offensive has been reduced to four months.

This means the Vice-President added, "only a couple more months of activity could be sustained" by the North Vietnamese. After describing morale in Saigon as high, he said that South Vietnamene leaders "feel they have turned the corner and are on their way back."

"We are coming out of the woods." Mr. Agnew said. He added, "I know that's been said before." But he said that he had never seen morale and spirit in South Vietnam so high;

This morale, Mr. Agnew said, was bolstered by the mining and other actions that Mr. Nixon ordered May 8. He said that there already has been "a very material effect on North Vietnamese supplies," citing a reduction in SAM missile-firings and little move-ment of large caliber artillery. Mr. Agnew said that the North Vietnamese may score "some limited military successes" while Mr. Nixon is in Moscow next week. But he said he doubted that the Communists will score any monnmental military achievements.

In future actions, Mr. Agnew said, "There are going to be failures ... but basically the trend will be toward success."

Mr. Agnew also visited Japan on his Far Eastern tour, representing Mr. Nixon at ceremonies returning Okinawa to Japanese control. He said that he found among Japanese leaders "tremendor support for American policy" in Vietnam. "They understand the need" for such actions, the Vice-

Rev. King's Widow Comes Out for McGovern

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, a longtime champion of civil rights in the Senate, lost the endorsement of Martin Luther King's widow yesterday to Sen. George S. McGovern as both Democratic presidential candidates opened their California campaigns.

Sen. Humphrey, opening his campaign in populous Southern California, declared that the polls showed that he was ahead in the June 8 primary, which will give the winner the state's entire bloc of 271 delegates to the Democratic convention. Nevertheless, I am prepared to put the issues on the line so that the people of California can decide for themselves. I invite my good friend McGovern to debate our differences." Sen. Humphrey proposed a se-

Although both men are also entered in the Oregon primary next Tuesday, they emphasized the importance of California by visiting here first. Sen. Humphrey said that he planned to campaign in the state for 16 straight days without letup. While in Los Angeles yesterday,

Sen. McGovern also got the endorsement of Cesar Chaven head the United Farm Workers "Sen. McGovern has consistent-would carry was yet to be seen, but it could be a blow to Sen. Humphrey, who has found one of his strongest bases of support in the nation's blacks. Mrs. King, in announcing her endorsement of the South Dakota senator, said she had reached agreement with him on a number of domestie and foreign policy matters.

Sen. John G. Tower, R., Texas, meantime, accused Sen. McGovern of a "blatant effort to sell out to the Communists in Vietnam."

Sen. Tower issued a statement saying "It has been clear for some time that the Democratic presidential candidates have speaking out of both sides of their mouths on Vietnam-pretending to want peace on the one hand, and on the other hand taking public positions designed to prolong the war through November."

He said, "Sen. McGovern's demand that the United States bow in shame to Communist aggression is the most reprehensible example of this."

Nathaniel Samuels Leaving State Dept.

WASHINGTON, May 19 CReuters).--President Nixon has announced the resignation of Nathaniel Samuels as deputy under secretary of etate for economic affairs, effective May 31. Mr. Samuels, who has served in the post since March, 1969, has taken a leading role in trade negotiations with the European Economic Community.

A successor had not yet been chosen. Mr. Samuels said in a letter to the President that he was returning to private life for purely personal reasons.

TROUBLE IN MADAGASCAR—Part of the crowd of 50,000 assembled in front of Tananarive's burned-out City Hall Thursday before marching on to the Presidential Palace.

Malagasy Crowds Demanding President Formally Resign

19 (AP),-Gen, Gabriel Ramanantson, the island nation's new strongman, today carried a screaming crowd's demand that President Philibert Tstranana resign to the 61-year-old leader, re-elected to office this year by 99.7 percent of the vote.

But no word came out of the meeting between the army chief of staff and the president, whose ouster the students and workers who have shaken the Malagasy government are holding up as a condition for a return to calm.

"The fact that I am installed in the Andafiavaratra"-the presidential palace—"should be sufficient to have your confidence." Gen. Ramanantsoa told the throng after a 54-minute meeting with Mr. Tsiranana.

"We don't agree," the crowd roared back.

Quesilen of Referendum

Another military leader, Gen. Gilles Andriamahazo, military governor of Tananarive, said in a speech that Mr. Tsiranana's ouster would require a referendum. He said he was not sure that the president's resignation was wanted by the population outside the capital of the island off Africa's east coast.

In a radio address, Gen. Ramanantson seemed to indicate he was not pressing for Mr. Tsiranana's departure. He said: "I want to make it clear in order to avoid all ambiguity that the president of the republic is the ather and the symbol of national unity, but that he gave me full power to lead the country."

In Paris, the newspaper Le Monde described the general as a Francophile and conservative, very attached to the respect of the law in all its forms, and hardly suspect in any case of the slightest sympathy for the pro-

Gun Advocates Favor Limited Control Laws

WASHINGTON, May 19 (UPI). -The National Rifle Association today described the shooting of Gov. George C. Wallace as "sense-less" but cautioned Congress against going too far in enacting tougher gun control legislation.

Maxwell E. Rich, executive vice-president of the organization, said the association supports "in principle" a bill to prohibit the sale of crude, unsafe handguns known as "Saturday night specials" but only if they are carefully defined.

Mr. Rich also said that Arthur H. Bremmer, accused of shooting Gov. Wallace at a Maryland political rally Monday, was in violation of both Wisconsin and Maryland state gun control laws when the shooting occured.

"The raillion members of the NRA and all shooter-sportsmen are abhorred at this most recent near-tragedy," his statement said. "We call for swift and stringent punishment of the criminal, and we will support any legislation which is meaningful in the fight against crime but which also protects the rights and privileges of the law-

SHANGHAL MAY 19 (WP) --An operation to resttech fingers severed in accidents, first performed experimentally five years ago, has now become routine in Chins.

This was usered in an laterview here by the surgeon who developed the technique, Dr. Chen Chung-wei. The development has not been publicized here, since all Chinese medical journals were forced to suspend publication in the early days of the Cultural Revolution. Dr. Chen declined to speculate on when I ill details of his fingerreattachment technique might be made available to his colleagues here and abroad, but he added technique throughout China and that many surgical groups here are capable of performing the Arms and legs severed in ac-

"Thousands" of Cases At Dr. Chen's hospital, over 150 such operations have been performed. It is not known how many others have been done in the rest of China, but Dr. Chen stimated that it "runs into the thousands."

Asked how successful the operation was. Dr. Chen claimed a recovery rate in excess of 50 percent. He explained that success was measured in terms of the patient's ability to use his hand and fingers normally or nearly normally. In most cases, he added, this took from six months

Only fingers that have been as Dr. Chen put it, "cleanly severed" can be resttached. Fingers that have been badly crushruled Poland he was arrested as ed cannot be successfully reima spy and released after inter-

Jagged Cuts However, he added, some jagged cuts can be operated on successfully. In such cases it is necessary to cut away injured tissue and reduce finger length. But such shortened fingers generally function normally or nearly normally after the usual recovery time, he said. Resttachment of severed fingers, Dr. Chen sald, is much more difficult than such operations on arms and legs. It took nearly two years of experimental work before his group was ready to operate on the first human.

There are a number of reasons The major on is that blood vessels and nerves in fingers are extremely small Suturing them together, even working under a microscope, proved to be very, very difficult during the animal experiments. We failed far more often than we succeeded."

Political Explanation

Asked how they overcame the problem, Dr. Chen-as most Chinese doctors would-gave a political reason.

"During a visit to an agricultural commune I met a peasant who had lost one of his fingers when it was caught in the blade of a disk harrow. He asked me why I could not rejoin eevered fingers since I could reattach severed limbs. "I tried to shrug his question off, saying that it is easier to repair a clock than a watch. He rejected the explanation and suggested that if I studied Chairmen Mao's writings more thoroughly I would find the answer." Dr. Chen and his group did. They also discovered in the laboratory that the blood vessels and nerves on the margin of rabbits' ears were about the same size as those in the fingers of humans. As a result, they began a long series of new attempts to join rabbit ears that had been "The results," Dr. Cher "were disappointing. The ruptured frequently. SALT Talks Reported Agreed On Unit to Examine Violations

By Thomas J. Hamilton

HELSINKI May 19 (NYT) .-The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed in principle to establish a standing committee to examine any charges of violations of the proposed limitations on strategic arms, sources said loday. The committee would have an equal number of U.S. and Soviet members.

The verification problem and other issues are being settled in the rush to end the first phase of the arms talks in time to prepare the agreements for signature during President Nixon's visit to Moscow next week.

The inclusion in Mr. Nixon's of Gerard C. Smith, the chief U.S. negotiator in the twoand-a-half years of talks, is taken bere as confirmation that the talks will recess next week. They will continue through Sunday and possibly Monday, a conference source said. It is as-sumed that Vladimir S. Semyonov, the head of the Soviet delegation, will also go to Moscow to act as an adviser in the talks.

Ceiling of 5,700 Warheads

It was still not clear, however, whether agreement would be reached before Mr. Smith's departure for Moscow on an interim agreement imposing a ceiling of 5,700 warheads on landbased and submarine-launched nuclear missiles. The draft treaty, a source said, would allow the United States and the Soviet Union 200 defensive anti-ballistic missiles each, and the draft is now complete except for the decision regarding the joint committee. Its size has not been disclosed.

There was no information on the difficulties still holding up the interim agreement. If they are not settled here, the open issues will be presented to Mr. Nixon and Soviet leaders for decision. Mr. Nixon indicated a month ago that it would be necessary to overcome the final disagreements at the Moscow talks.

The establishment of the committee would partly fill one of the principal gaps in the proposed treaty on defensive missiles the absence of any provision for inspection.

Sources said that the principal evidence that could be presented to the committee by the complainant would be photographs from observation satellites These have proved very accurate, as shown by the U.S. satelilte photographs of large holes for the emplacement of Soviet missile launchers in the Moscow area.

Information obtained from intelligence sources also might be submitted, sources said. They emphasized, however, that there was no question of on-site ins-pection. The U.S. demand for comprehensive international inspection, including on-site inspection, bas blocked any agreement with the Soviet Union restricting nuclear weapons throughout the postwar period. Sources concede that the voting line-op on a joint committee would probably prevent it from making a decision. But both sides were reported to feel that this would be preferable to the only other international machinery now available, an appeal to the United Nations Security Council for an investigation.

As in every snnual meeting since 1969, the Communist bloc insisted East Germany could make an important contribution to the 133-nation body.

During the debate, several Communist delegates alluded to the Communist bloc's threat to boycot, the UN Environment Conference opening in Stockholm next month because East Germany is not invited. Admission of East Germany to the World Health Organization would have opened the door for its participation in Stockholm.

Western delegates, while not opposing the principle of East German membership in the organization, stressed that the time is not ripe. False Face

It seemed a legitimate concern of the United States that Communism not be allowed to take Vietnam by default. There was ample and convincing ideological momentum to impel Washington to forestall any real or imagined thrust by Peking to assert hegemony over Southeast Asia.

Now, however, in the wake of President Nixon's rapprochement with Communist China and in the light of his start toward Moscow Saturday, accommodation with the Communist world has not only become a benchmark of administration policy; it has also removed much of the ideological underpinning from the United States position in

The rationale of Mr. Nixon's withdrawal strategy acknowledges negotiated coexistence as the only path to a viable settlement. It must assume the probability of a coalition arrangement that will eventually include Viet Cong representatives. Moreover. Dr. Kissinger's recent eecret talks with Soviet party chief Brezhnev-regardless of their efficacy—must have been undertaken on the presumption that the United States accepted coexistence. Ideology, therefore, is plainly no longer a convincing premise for continuing the war.

Coexistence does not mean that Communism must be endorsed or abetted; it merely registers the evident fact that among nations of competing ideologies in a nuclear world, coexistence ie the only alternative to suicidal coercion.

However, the President's recent declaration that "we will not be defeated" reinjected the element of ideology. This was underscored by his remarks at the Connally ranch that he could not permit a "Communist take-over" of South Vietnam lest the presidency 'lose respect" in the eyee of the world. "In the final analysis," said Mr. Nixon, "what is really on the line is the position of the United States as the strongest nation in the

But that is precisely what is not on the line-or should not be on the line-if accommodation is the policy of the administration. The logic of that policy should carry

After the French pulled out of Indochina, over to Vietnam if withdrawal is genuinely the objective along with elections of, by and for the Vietnamese. Asserting American invincibility puts face-saving above the national interest in ending involvement in a destructive, divisive, debilitating war that the administration seems in most other respects to be desperately anxious to cut

> Were the United States to maintain, in effect, that it must save face to liquidate its position in this tragic war, it could only dissipate world respect, for it would then have to escalate air and naval attacks even more horrendously. That risk has already been created by the administration's response to the current North Vietnamese offensive. The mining of the ports and other waterwaye and the renewed bombing combined with the implied threat of even greater retaliation make Washington dependent on the degree to which Moscow and Peking maintain their restraint and forewear confrontation. This dependence further commits the administration to coexistence, even granting that saving face could hardly have meant turning the other cheek. Still, the North Vietnamese offensive was not unexpected. Indeed, the Vietnamization program itself assumed the likelihood of such an ..

It was naturally discouraging to see the South Vietnamese troops respond so poorly to the first stages of the offensive, and admittedly this weakened the American bargaining position. But it would serve no purpose now to re-invoke anti-Communism as another hurdle on the way to the peace table. Ideological rigidity will put a false face on negotiations if and when they resume. The aim should rather be to show np Hanoi's own rigidity on the issues. In the long run, Hanoi may prove to be more intransigent than any Washington hawk As in all bargaining, the crux of the problem now is to determine in public or in private -how far both sides can go toward compromising their differences without compromising their integrity.

Bengali Backlash

Reports from Dacca tell of murder, rape and other acts of violence and intimidation painfully reminiscent of the Pakistani repression last year that led to the Indian invasion of East Bangladesh. This time, however, it is not Pakistani soldiers committing the atrocities, but the Bengalis themselves who appear to be taking a terrible vengeance on the Bihari minority—Urdu-speaking Moslems who settled in East Bengal after the partition of India in 1947.

Bengali bitterness is understandable since troops in the horrors that preceded independence. But this is no excuse for the indiscriminate mob violence that has created a climate of terror in Bihari communities. Bangladesh, which is heavily dependent on international sympathy and support; cannot expect the world to be indifferent when Bengalis commit the very crimes of which they had vehemently accused others.

President Mujibur Rahman has promised justice for all in the new, secular Bengali nation. He has a moral obligation to protect the 1.5 million Biharis in Bangladesh until a peace settlement in South Asia clears the way for those who wish to leave to resettle in Pakistan in exchange for Bengalis still living there.

International Opinion

Bonn's Ostpolitik

The West German Bundestag has approved the nonaggression treaties with the Soviet Union and Poland. We are happy that the treaties are now virtually assured of complete ratification on the eve of President Nixon's visit to the Soviet Union. This is because Nixon will be able to talk effectively with the Kremlin leaders on the proposed European security conference and the problem of a mutually balanced reduction of NATO and Warsaw Pact forces, paving the way to permanent peace in Europe.

-From the Yomiuri Shimbun (Tokyo).

Whitelaw's Task in Ulster

Everybody wishes Mr. Whitelaw well in his forbidding task in Northern Ireland, and he was wrong in suggesting that any critics expect him to put things right in a few weeks. So far he has handled the "initiative" with good sense, friendliness, patience and courage, but without, perhaps, that bit of panache which a situation of this kind demands. That may be one of the reasons why there has been little or no visible response from the Roman Catholic communities and things have gone on in much the same way as before.

---From the Daily Telegraph (London).

The Summit Talks

It is from businesslike and realistic positions that the Soviet Union approaches the crucial talks, which may be of benefit to the vital interests of the peoples of the Soviet Union and the United States, to universal peace and security. The Soviet people very well realize what significance the state of Soviet-American relations has for the life of the peoples of both nations as well as for the international situation, for its further development toward stable peace. All Soviet people, like an overwhelming majority of mankind, firmly declare for relaxation of international tensions, for normalization of relations with the United States.

-From Pravda (Moscow). * * *

The decision to maintain the summit project is imlikely to have been made easily by the leaders in the Kremlin at a time when American mines block the coast of a friendly socialist country and trap a certain number of Soviet ships in Haiphong. If it was decided to disregard these objections, it was because the Soviet Union, as 2 world power, cannot afford to subordinate all its policies to the development of a conflict. very serious indeed, but nonetheless local and due to remain so in the opinion of all powers. Washington and Moscow have too many interests in common and negotiations under way to stop halfway-strategic arms limitation (about which an agreement appears very near), Middle East, Europe and, above all, trade and credits.

The memory of Mr. Nixon's recent trip to China is also likely to have influenced the decision. In canceling the Soviet-American meeting, Mr. Brezhnev would have surrendered to his Chinese rivals the exclusivity of the dialogue with the United States. And, after all, American bombs were already falling on North Vietnam when Mr. Nixon was received by Mao. Obviously what is lacking for a better understanding of these events is any knowledge of the secret dealings that have taken place, and are probably going on, between Washington and Moscow, on the one hand, and Moecow and Hanoi on the other.

WASHINGTON .- For over a W quarter of a century, the United States and the Soviet Union have been concentrating on the issues that divided them-Berlin, the Middle East, Kores Vietnam, Cuba, and the organization of Western Europe-but now, after many savage differences and pointless miseries, their leaders are getting together in Moscow to talk about limited but important areas of cooperation.

Nobody should expect. too much. The conflict of philosophies and national objectives is as strong and wide as ever, but they have a common interest in avoiding a major war, in controlling the arms race-now costing the nations of the world over $280 billion a year—expanding trade, cooperating in the explora-tion of space, and getting hold of the drug traffic, the spread of disease, pollution, and anarchy.

West Germany, who took more chances than anybody else to knock a few holes in the Tron Curtain, hit just about the right note after the Bundestag in Bonn agreed reluctantly to ratify the treaties, but merely that accepting realities you cannot change and compromising for peace no matter how painful, was "the path

A Rocky Path

Well, it will be a rocky path. Brezhnev it not going to ball Nixon out of Vietnam. His tanks may very well be battering the old im-perial capital of Hue while the President is watching Swan Lake at the Bolshol, but now that he has consolidated Moscow's world war territorial gains in Europe, he is ready to talk about the world beyond Vietnam, and maybe even about the world beyond Mao Tse-tung in Peking, Chiang Kai-shek in Taipei, and Elsaku Sato in Tokyo,

A lot of hard work and common sense have gone into the preparation of Nixon's Moscow mission, and limited agreements on strategic arms, trade, access to Berlin, European security, and space are about ready for signature on satellite television in the Kremlin. So this could be the most important U.S.-Soviet conference since the end of the last war, though that isn't saying very much or changing the fundamental conflict between the two

They have already egreed to keep nuclear weapons out of space and off the ocean floors, and to stop polluting the etmosphere with atomic tests in the sky, so now they are about ready to agree on controlling the production of offensive and defensive missiles, and share the expense of exploring the universe, all of which is both sensible and long overdue.

It will be said-in fact Nixon was one of the pioneers of the argument—that trading and cooperating with the Soviet Union only strengthened a government and system committed to the destruction of the non-Commumist nations.

And also, that the Communists have merely changed their tac-tics and not their objectives, and have learned that you catch more flies with honey than with vinegar, and there is some truth in this, but as the world is going, not much

But it is not going to be denied the most modern computers and technology by an American embargo or the old American myths of "trading with the enemy," and nobody now knows this better than Nixon. Goals of Russia

By James Goldsborough

DARIS-Henry Kissinger remarked at a press conference two weeks ago that there were two schools of thought on the Russian role in the current North Vietnamese offensive: One believed the Russians actually pushed Hanol into the attack in order to humiliate the United States, the other believed that the Soviet Union was just as embarrassed by the offensive as Washington. Mr. Kissinger said he was of the latter school. Diplomats here, who follow these things closely, are convinced that Moscow was as surprised by the April offensive as everybody else. Moreover, they believe that once the men in the Kremlin got over their initial shock at what was happening, they never at any time considered canceling President Nixon's visit.

Vietnam is simply too marginal for the Soviet Union.

To Illustrate this concept of "marginality," there is the joke currently making the rounds in Soviet diplomacy: An officer in charge of the missiles and the buttons leaves his post to go to the tollet, leaving only a clean-ing lady behind. "Above all, don't touch the buttons," he tells her on the way out. When he rethat she unfortunately has knocked one of the buttons with her broom. "Which one!" he screams. The View From Hanoi

By Anthony Lewis

HANOI, Writing from North Vietnam is a strange experience. A reporter seldom goes to a country with which his own is actively at war. But it is not only the emotions that are confusing. There is the problem of Ordinarily it is tedious and selfimportant for newspapermen to write about their own concerns. Like politicians, they asked for the job and deserve no sympathy. But the difficulty of forming accurate judgmente about North Vietnam is not just a newspaper problem; it has been at the heart of the whole American entanglement in this war for seven years.

Consider the question of fear, I have been in North Vietnam & week now and during a considerable part of that time I have been afraid. Other Europeans. here say the same French, Swedish, Soviet, Italian, British, East German. It is no fun being in a small country while the most powerful on earth is bombing it.

In the Shelters.

But in the bomb shelters, while the Europeans look especially pale, the Vietnamese chatter and laugh. Does this mean they are not afraid? Of course anything may become more bearable over time but they clearly still know fear. They explain that they have no choice except to fight until the Americans go away. When a young girl says that, does it represent some general truth about Vietnamese attitudes?

That leads to the central opertion of this country's determinetion. It is simply impossible for an outsider to find anyone who expresses feelings other than a confident stoletsm about the war. One saks a frail, elderly man, a historian and poet, whether North Vietnam would fight on if Americe escalated the bombing further. He replies, "In 1945 and 1946 we had a famine in which two million people died. The war

Is that attitude a result of Communist indoctrination and repression? Or dose it spring genuinely from Vietnamese history, from the thousands of years of fighting against Chinese and other invadors? One can only offer the judgment supported by the Western diplomata and other observers here—that it is genuine.

Propaganda is incessant, naturally. The newspapers are full of stories of great victories in the South and the shooting down of American pienes. There is no immediate way to judge the securacy of a claim unless one happens to see with one's own eyes, When American bombers hit civilian tergets in Hanoi, correspondents are taken to see the damage but sometimes after a raid officials refuse to say what has been hit; the likely conclusion is that it was military targets.

Restrictions and propaganda are hardly unusual in wartime. in any country. The curious thing is that the North Vietnamese have allowed reports on some military matters to go out uncensored when a correspondent happened to see something-for example the observation that the ficial claims

CANNES: Two Italian Films Share Top '72 Award

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

CANNES, May 19 (IET).-Two Italian films, both starring Gian Maria Volonte, shared the grand prix in the 1972 Cannes Film

The jury congratulated Ello Petri ("The Workin, Class Goes to Heaven") and Francesco Rosi ("The Mattei Affair") on the unity of their films and emphasized the exceptional quality of Volonte's interpretation of the leading roles in both movies.

The Soviet film, "Solaris," directed by Andrei Tarkovski, was awarded the jury's special Susannah York was named the best actress for her performance as the schizophrenic heroine of "Images," directed by Robert Altman, the Irish entry. Jean Yanne was named best actor for his role as the ne'er-do-well lover in a French entry, "Nous Ne Viell-lirons Pas Ensemble," directed by Maurice Pialat.

Best Director

Miklos Jancso was named best for his film, "Red the Hungarian entry. director Psalm," George Roy Hill's "Slaughter-house Five," representing the United States, was awarded the Prizes for shorts were allotted to a French film, "Le Pusil à Lunette" by Jean Chapot (the grand prix) and "Opération X-70" by Rapul Servais of Belgium (a special jury prize).

In retrospect the 1972 Cannes

Festival appears in large measure an orgy of mediocrity-in so far as the films selected for the contest were concerned. The most satisfactory offering on the offi-cial program was the American "Slaughterhouse Five," a brilliant and exceptionally original work. Altman's experimental technique in "Images" was fascinating. Johannes Schaafs "Trotta" (West Germany) was an adroit transposition of an interesting novel. Peter O'Toole gave what is probably his most versatile screen performance in "The Ruling Class" (Great Britain), The lyrical composition of Jancso's 'Red Psalm' was most imaginative. There was the promise of dramatic fire in the Soviet "Solaris," though that promise remained unfulfilled. The acting of the little boy, Gabby Otter-man, in the Israeli entry, "I Love You Ross," and certainly that of the supporting entire cast in "The Ruling Class" was superior by obvious and urgent need of the aid that prizes can bestow. In contrast, there have been some excellent films seen outside the cootest. These have included "Fellini Roma," John Huston's "Fat City." 'Fritz the Cat" and Hitchcock's "Frenzy," which was shown tonight after the ceremony at which the prizes were awarded.

"Heat," produced by Andy Warhol and directed by Paul Morris-sey, proved one of the most interesting efforts of the underground cinema. It is a bicarre tale of Hollywood nitwits, often hilariously funny and amusingly acted by Sylvia Miles as a faded star and by Lester Persky as her quarrelsome ex-husband. In a eense, it is a burlesque version of "Sunset Boulevard," less grim and perhaps closer to the truth.

Another film of striking merit was "The Glass House," e starkly realistic view of prison life, based on a Truman Capote story. In many aspects it resembles the Canadian play, 'Fortune and Men's Eyes," which was subsequently filmed and is now on show in Paris. But one suspects that the experiences of young convicts serving behind the hars are very similar regardless of nationality.

Some distinguished guests brightened the 1972 festival. The reshowing of the Marx Brothers' elassic, "A Night at the Opera." proved that good jokes never die. The great Groucho himself proved in person that his wit has not been withered by the years.

Alfred Hitchcock, coming to at tend the world premiere of his new and breathtaking thriller, "Frenzy," explained at a press conference that he wished to qualify his much-quoted comment on actors. "There is a rumor that I said "Actors are cattle," he complained. "I have been mis-quoted. I said 'Actors should be

A Triumphant Revival of Sherriff's 'Journey's End'

By John Walker

TONDON, May 19 (IHT).-Shaw, after reading the script of R.C. Sherriff's "Journey's End," decided that the play was no more than a documentary, useful as a corrective to the romantic conception of war. Had he seen it in performance—a privilege we can enjoy in the excellent, affectionate, and highly enjoyable revival at the Mermaid Theatre—he might have recognized that the play is something more than journalism.

I would not be surprised to see history repeating itself and the play once again taking London by storm as it did after its original production in 1928. Apart from its effectiveness as drama. it has acquired a powerful period fascination-Shaw also called it

"the newspaper of the day before yesterday"—in its accurate portrayal of the manner in which a generation reacted to the horrors of World War I -or, at least, how the upper middle-class

For the cannon fodder, the privates, are allowed no opinions. being around to provide comic relief and to do stolcally as they are told. Trotter, the one officer who has worked his way up from the ranks, is portrayed as a man no imagination and an object of condescension for his fellow officers. The war is fought according to the public (i.e., private) school ethos, an attitude that now requires a suspension of disbelief, so great seems the gap between the officers' playing field metaphors and the muddy actuality of death. The only character who is not little more than a schoolboy-a prefect one day, a second lieutenant the next-is a middle-aged schoolmaster.

The talk is of chaps being decent or awfully bucked, of topping or of beastly adventures. A new recruit, searching for words to convey his admiration for another officer, expresses it in cricketing terms, remembering that he was a jolly good bat at

The nearest anyone comes to questioning the war is in a moment of typically clipped, understated dialogue:

"It all seems rather silly, doesn't it?" "Yes, it does rather."

But Mr. Sherriff conveys a sense of waste through his characters who begin as types -the here on the point of crackup, the hero-worshipper, the coward—but quickly become in-dividuals. The action covers four days in a dug-out, moving from easy humor as the men come on duty to the grim conclusion as the survivors go out to try to fight off an enemy advance in the knowledge that they will not

The horror is effectively conveyed through the device of a new officer, fresh from school and awfully keen to fight, who agrees enthusiastically with the doctrine "Think of it all as romantic, it helps" until he discovers the reality of leading men into certain death.

The original production made stars of the two actors—Laurence Olivier and Colin Clive, who played the leading role of Stanhope, the young captain who is overwhelmed by what he has experienced. Peter Egan, who now plays the part, gives a fine performance as do the other principals in this perfectly cast production: Harry Landis as the witty cook, Christopher Good as the keen newcomer, Colin Prockter as the lugubrious Trotter, and Bruce Robinson as the rotter.

But the honors go to James Maxwell as Uncle, the schoolmasterly officer. It is a comperformance, pecially moving as he goes on a suicidal mission, regretting only that he does not have time to finish smoking his pipe. Eric Thompson's direction is faultless, apart from one scene, between Stanhope and his sergeant-major, which is played too openly for In all respects, Mr. Sherriff's play is again a triumnhant success. Jolly good show, chaps.

Jonathan Miller's National Theatre production of Sheridan'e "The School for Scandal" at the Old Vic is full of a Hogarthian vigor. He has not so much dusted off an old masterplece as put back the grime and squalor that was a part of 18th century life, even in the more refined circles The tone is set by the opening scene in Lady Sneerwell'e bed-chamber, with its grubby walls and cobwebbed four-poster. The lady herself is out of a Swiftian satire, balding and ravaged,

Bid to Save Titian Work Nears Goal

LONDON, May 19 (AP).— Britain's bid to prevent Titian's "Death of Actaeon" from being sold to American oil tycoon Paul Getty came £75,000 nearer success today.

The National Gallery reportanonymous donation of £75,000 toward matching Mr. Getty'e bid of $4,032,000 made at Christie's anction in London last June. Only £15,000 remains to be collected.

swigging spirits from a bottle before transforming herself into a figure of elegance. Sheridan's characters have been taken down a social notch or two: No longer the butterfly figures of the highest society but a provincial clique aping the worse manners of their betters. This gain in social realism, treating gossips as vicious bores, leads to a loss of comedy.

The screen scene still works perfectly, with Paul Curran's gruff Sir Peter Teazle overcome with grief as he discovers his wife (played by Louise Purnell as a country bumpkin) hiding in Joseph Surface's room. The contrasting relationship Joseph, the high-minded hypocrite, and brother Charles, the well-meaning rake, is well realized in the performances of Ronald Pickup and John Shrapnel.

But the play has lost some of its wit. Mr. Miller attempts to compensate for this by a concentration on the lesser characters. Crabtree (Denis Quilley) and Backbite (Malcolm Raid) become an irresistible double-act, each vying to upstage the other, Benjamin Whitrow is perfectly sinister as Snake, the treacherthe characters, the effect is less pleasing and even a little desperate.

Some critics, after seeing the Dolphin Theatre production of "Twelfth Night" at the Shaw Theatre, muttered that Shakespeare should be left to the Royal Shakespeare Company or the Na-tional Theatre, as if anyone should have a monopoly in our greatest author. It seemed, too, churlish reaction. Although Michael Bakewell's is undistinguished, flat-footing its way through the crushing most of the subtleties, there is an enchanting performance from Vanessa Redgrave as Viola. For her alone, the production is well worth seeing, and there are other compensations provided by the strong cast, notably Jonathan Cecil as an ideal Sir Andrew Aguecheel Peter Jeffrey's Malvolia, and Nyree Dawn Porter's Olivia.

The current late-night show et the Eampstead Theatre Club, Bob Graham's "Cartoons," provides mild amusement with a surfeit of short sketches much in the manner of Jules Feiffer.

the Japanese have played an important role either in person or through agents.

A third factor is the growing awareness of Western museums that opportunities to acquire highquality pieces are few and far between. All this accounts for the sharp rise in prices which culminated in London at sales on Feb. 29 and March 14. At the first of the two sales, the David-Weill collection broke several records for small objects of early periods. Two prices were of special significance. First, the lid of a bronze r of the Chou dynasty, about 9th century BC, fetched £4,000, a sumning price for a piece pri-marily of archaeological interest; collectors general. ly don't favor objects which are not complete in themselves. Another fantastic price was £40,000 paid for a gilt bronze bear—only 5-5/8 inches high—of the Han period. It is very unusual for such small objets d'art to rise above £15,000 except, of course, for lewelry.

At the Feb. 14 sale, the high trend continued. Two bronzes of the Shang period, both superb, were knocked down at £16,000 each. Both were bought by Tai of New York. A Tang figure of a polo player riding a horse in "flying gallops" with all four legs outstretched unrealistically—made 128,000. A splendid Sung bowl made £18,000 and a blue and white jar of the 15th century made

The apcoming auctions at Sotheby's and Christie's are well-timed. The present mood of buyers may be judged from the success of the exhibition of Chinese art from the late George de Manasce collection (through May 26) at Spink's, King Street, St. James's, London SW.1. Admittedly, the standard of quality is as high as could be desired. Yet it is remarkable that half the objects on view should have been sold within a week of the opening on On the face of it, the London auctioneers have every reason to feel optimistic. The high price trend established at the first two David-Welll sales of old French silver in Paris appears to be continuing. At a mixed sale of objets d'art, jewelry, old and modern silver at the Hotel Dronot today, Jean-Louis Picard auctioned a pair of candlesticks by Jacques Roettiers, with a mark indicating the years 1764-1765, for 63,000 francs. In contrast, a beautiful Restauration (1815-1820) saucière weighing 515 grams, made -1,160 francs, a real bargain if ever there was one,

At the Grand Palais, Paris

Art, Dissidents, the Police and the Establishment

By Michael Gibson DARIS, May 19 (IHT).-In 1969

French President Georges Pompidou, who is a fancier of avant-garde art, advanced the idea of organizing a large exhibition devoted to all of the more important artists, both French and foreign, now living and working in France.

The end result, 'Twelve Years of Contemporary Art in France." (it is also referred to as 'l'Exposition 72" or, with disapproving undertones. "Expo Pompidou") opened briefly on Tuesday at the Grand Palais with initially peaceful demonstrations by dissident artists and a police contingent standing by.

Around 4 p.m. the police charged the demonstrators who were etanding on the steps of the main entrance to the building. Some of the demonstrators were forced into the building Where there were brief fistfights with national museum officials who happened to be standing

Meanwhile reinforcements anparently were called in and a force of Gendarmes Mobiles was deployed in the small park in front of the building. Around 6 p.m., they charged again, roughing up the demonstrators and some of the first-day public.

This second clash prompted some of the artists to take their works from the walls while one group, the Coopérative des Malassis, removed their sequence of 50 canvases from the building and subsequently announced that they would not return under any circumstances.

Hostile Evocation

The sequence, entitled "Le Grand Mechoni" (Mechoui is an Arabic word for a convivial occasion during which a sheep is roasted whole), is an unambiguously hostile evocation of the period from 1960, when Pompldou entered De Gaulle's government, to the present. It dwells on such black spots as the 1962 Charonne Métro massacre and the recent housing scandal in which members of the government party have been implicated. The sheep implied in the title is. the voter. The presence of this work in the exhibition was viewed as a mark of liberalism on the part of Minister of Cultural Afcreative activity under the Fifth fairs Jacques Duhamel. Between the two police charges

there was a lot of frantic activity on the part of officials from tha Cultural Affairs Ministry. One of them went into the Commissarlat de Police, in the Grand Palais just under the exhibition rooms, and obtained assurance that the 4 p.m. incident would not be repeated. Apparently a high-level intervention was not sufficient to cool the arder of the police, and the second wave came in with regular riot helmets and weapons.

Declaration

The organizers of the exhibition, including François Mathey was put in charge of the whole thing with President Pompidou's blessing, were indignant and voiced their anger in a firm statement: "A small and peaceful demonstration occurred in front of the Grand Palais and was violently repressed by the police. The organizing committee condemns this inadmissible act unanimously and with the utmost energy. It is contrary to formal assurances that had been

The next day, Wednesday, 36 of the exhibiting artists assembled and signed a declaration of their own stating that they were "indignant at the police violence ... which lent an absurd credibility to the revolting hypothesis that the exhibition was a neo-Nazi demonstration." They went on to demand an inquiry in order to determine who was

Meanwhile the enormous pres-tige exhibition, an inventory of Republic that reportedly cost the state around $700,000, remained closed to the public. The ridiculous and brutal incident at the opening (one person was wounded) raised much speculation. Obviously it hurts not only the artists but also the money and prestige in the show, and its chief who willed it. Some circles hint darkly at a high-level "réglement de comptes" within the majority party: The police charge was a deliberate ploy to wreck the opening. Officials protest that the decision for the police intervention was taken by the local police commissioner. One wonders of course that such a relatively modest official should choose to ignore the express wishes of a cabinet minister. The Paris daily Aurore on the other hand quotes the police commissioner himself, who claims that be sent his men because they were called for by the organizers. (For the organizers' disclaimer the reader may go back three paragraphs).

Today, a full meeting of all the artists was called at the Grand Palais. Some had hoped that this would lead to a majority withdrawing their works from the show. Instead, the 64 artists present agreed, during the course of a four-hour discuscion, that the exhibition should be opened to the public beginning May 24. In a statement. the artists said that opening the exhibition would not resolve the problem and that keeping it closed would be giving in to opponents of their work. They agreed to the Wednesday reopening with the understanding that demonstrations at the exhibition would be allowed. Their resolution was approved by the organizing committee.

The presence of dissident artists at the opening merely gave physical visibility to a violent subterranean debate that has been razing over the past season at least-a debate prompted by malaise characterizing the relationship between the art world and the establishment.

The political crisis surrounding the show hinges mainly on the concept of "recuperation" which implies that any statement-and even the most devastating-made by art, can be neutralized by a materially powerful and spirltually amorphous consumer soclety. A typical case—and one far enough removed in time to be clearly intelligible—is the integration of Van Gogh, his madness, his agony, his severed ear and raging painting into the tame folklore of our society. Recuperation is at the outset a psychological process of neutralization of whatever is disturb ing, but to critics of the Pompidou show it is basically a political process, unconcerted efficient and independent from any explicit decision.

Exhibiting in a state-sponsored show is viewed by some as courting recuperation - also because whatever is displayed there, even if it is explicitly hostile to the government nonetheless accrues to its credit. Hence the banners carried by the demonstrators which proclaimed: 'Expo Pompidou-73 artists at the service of the establishment!" show, occurring in 1972, originally

A large segment of the public is increasingly rejecting authority in all areas (ethics, art, paychology, end politics, for intance. But this rejection is not clearcut and the figures of authority themselves are not going along with it. What is implied in the new tendency is a redefinition of authority which would ultimately be much mora demanding on those who are in positions of authority, as well as

Much of the strain and debate appears to arise cut of a divergence that even a traditionally liberal policy cannot eliminate. The Minister of Cultural Affairs Jacques Duhamel wrote to Le Monde complaining that, as the artists view the question, he is damned if he does (show their work) and damaed if he doesn't.

His point of view is entirely consistent (and that of the artists eppears unreasonable) because it rests on traditional liberal premises. valid and applicable in a limited tield, rather like Newtonian physics that have practical relevance even today. One may finally wonder whether anything the minister might do could resolve the problem as long as we live in a world where material goals are better defined than spiritual ones.

are known to have complained that the Bank of Japan's dollarbuying operations last August at the old rate of 360 yen when all other exchange markets were clos-ed constituted a form of subsidy. Apparently neither of these practices, if they existed, would attract countervailing duties, however, since such duties can not be applied retroactively, as is the case with dumping duties. Moreover, Mr. Terada said, U.S. charges that Japan compensated exporters for the 10 percent import surcharge are not true. Japanese newspapers splashed the Treasury move on their front pages. Various reports suggested that a renewed crisis in U.S.-Japan economic relations could result from this action, combined with recent U.S. attempts to tighten anti-dumping regulations. The sensational treatment given by the press to the new developments brought criticism from Foreign Minister Takeo Fuconference that U.S.-Japan relations are not as atrained as the newspapers claim. "There isn't any confrontation sentiment (between the two countries) as was observed at this time last year," he said.

Individual Japanese electronics manufacturers seemed to be resigned to taking a wait-and-see attitude over the investigation. Japan Agrees to U.S. Call For Another Trade Parley

TOKYO, May 18 (AP-DJ) - Japan agreed today to accept a U.S. proposal to bold vice-ministerial level trade talks in the near future. The proposal was made yesterday by U.S. trade negotiator William Eberle, who is currenly visiting Japan. A government spokesman said the exact time and place of the talks, and the officials who will take part in them, will

The spokesman also quoted International Trade and Industry Minister Kakuel Tanaka as saying, "I'm glad I don't have to attend the talks." Mr. Tanaka took an active role in the last Jepan-U.S. economic discussions earlier this year. It was his idea to press for a one-year moratorium in these exchanges to help cool the confrontation etmosphere that had 'built up in the two countries' economic relations. But in recent weeks, Mr. Tanaka himself has hinted that the moratorium would probably be broken:

Meanwhile, Mr. Eberle urged Japanese businessmen today to push for fundamental changes in Japan's international comornic policies.

In a speech before the Keldanren business group, he said: "What good would be the phenomenal success of Japanese exports and the great accumulation of Japanese foreign exchange reserves if imports weren't really more important than exports? No pation I know of has ever made the supreme sacrifice of exporting its wealth simply to allow others to enjoy the benefits of less expensive imports." .

It is intended that Toshio Ki-mura, director-general of the economic planning agency, will present the government plan to a ministerial meeting of the Organisation of Economic Coopera-tion and Development (OECD) in Paris next Wednesday.

The new plan is expected to be a collection of measures already under consideration, and its format is likely to be similar to the eight-point plan put forth about this time last year in an attempt to stem foreign domands for e revaluation of the yen. That vaguely worded document, regarded in retrospect as a classic example of too little, too late, was a notable failure in its in-

Questions, Criticism In recent weeks, Japanese of-ficials have hinted that they expect Mr. Kimura to run into close questioning at best, and considerable criticism at worst, at the OECD gathering.

Reports reaching Tokyo say both the Europeans and the United States are upset because Japan is still accumulating foreign currency at a significant rate and still running a huge trade surplus, even after last December's yen revaluation.

Although both U.S. and European officials have agreed that it will take some time for the effects of the December parity realignment to be reflected in Japan's trade statistics, they are reported to be concerned that Japan is not taking proper steps to help this progress run its intended course.

Specifically, Japan has been criticized for maintaining rela-tively high domestic interest rates at a time when the belance of payments is in substantial surplus, and for failing to remove remaining import restrictions and non-tariff barriers. These clearly are not needed when a country is running a $9 billion annual-rate trade surplus as Japan-is at present, the country's critics argue.

Although some of the following points are still subject to adjustment at tomorrow's meeting, it is believed the Japanese will tell the OECD that in order to bring equilibrium to the country's

Food Prices

Down in U.S.

WASHINGTON, May 19 (WP). The Labor Department reported today that the cost of living rose a scant 0.2 percent in April, ond thet supermarket prices actually declined for the first time since last October.

Marina Whitman, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said at a press conference that the figures were "gratifying evidence of sustained progress on the inflation front."

The administration's target is to cut the annual rate of infla-tion to between 2 and 3 percent

Mrs. Whitman noted that the consumer price index was rising at a seasonally-adjusted annual rate of 4 percent over the six months that preceded last Angust's wage-price freeze.

It has risen at a rate of only 3.3 percent in the five months since the freeze gave way to the present wage-price controls. The index measures the prices of all the goods and services that an average urban wage carner buys in a normal month. On a sessonally-adjusted basis, it did not rise at all in March. The 02 percent it rose in April

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Italian Bank, N.Y. Broker in Tie

In what apparently marks the first investment by a major European commercial bank in a New York Stock Exchange member firm, the Milanbased Banca Commerciale Italiana will purchase a 20 percent interest in Model, Roland & Co. Leo Model, chairman end chief executive, reports that the 350-branch foreign institution's investment is to take the form of about $2.8 million equity and subordinated debentures. The arrangement, just approved by the stock exchange's governing board, also calls for the bank's U.S. underwriting and investment banking subsidiary —First Washington Securities Corp.—to be absorbed by Model' Roland. The project reflects the effort by securities firms to bolster their capital positions to mest what many in the industry see as sharp competitive challenge in years to come. This need also is being occentuated as the prospect increases that a broader range of the brokerage-commission ecate will be thrown open to customer-broker negotiation.

Alcoa Technology Sought in Japan

Furukawa Aluminum Co., a joint venture of Aluminum Co. of America (Alcoa) and two Japanese companies, has decided in request government approval to introduce aluminum smelting technology developed by Alcoa. Furnkews, an aluminum rolling concern owned 33.3 percent by Alcon, 61.7 percent by Furukawa Electric Co. and percent by Nippon Light Metal Co., has been planning to expand its operations into smelting to become an integrated aluminum product manufecturer, officials say. They add that the company expects to build an aluminum smelting plant with annual processing capacity of 70,000

Grand Jury Probes U.S. Copper Firms

Mining Journal and other industry publications.

NEW YORK, Mey 19 (AP-DJ). -Every major U.S. copper producer has had its records subpoenned in an investigation being conducted here by a grand jury.

Though the copper companies are keeping silent about the investigation because of an understanding that details would not be disclosed, a genuine puzzle about the possible purposes of the etudy appears to be shared by most executives and observers.

Nine major companies con-firmed they had been served with court papers last week. These companies together account for almost all the copper mined in the United States. None of several copper-manufacturing companies reached said they were involved in the investigations.

The Justice Department and the U.S. Attorney's office in Brooklyn also declined to con-firm or deny that there was any investigation under way;

Reason Not Known

"I don't know what they're after," said Ronald Schorr, a copper analyst for Dean Witter & Co. "and from what I hear, the companies don't know either." John Bogert, an analyst for Lehman Brothers, said: "There's no reason for an investigation now. Unless they can prove that the companies heve net in s secret room and combined to raise their prices simultaneously I don't see what kind of case they can make," Among the copper companies, whose epokesmen and executives would not be quoted, there was even some uncertainty that the investigation was looking into possible anti-trust violations for price manipulation.

However, the subpoenas require them to submit documents relating to the publishing of copper

Money Expansion Is Slowing, Fed Report Indicates NEW YORK, May 19 (NYT) .-

Monetary expansion in the United States, which earlier in the year had quickened at a rete that some economists regarded as excessive, has subsided somewhat in recent weeks, Federal Reserve figures indicated yesterday.

The money supply, for example, averaged $234.7 billion in the four weeks ended May 12, which represented a 10.8 percent season-ally adjusted, compounded annual growth rate in the three months ended on that date. By contrast, two weeks earlier, the quarterly growth rate was 11.5 percent

To some degree, reserve operations were distorted this week by the 'Treasury's decision to 'monetize"-that is, convert into money its $828-million paper profit that resulted from the increase in the official price of gold to $38 an ounce from $35 as part of the devaluation of the dollar. The Treasury then proceeded to spend these funds-both for regular government operations as well as to pay off $700 million of Tressury notes that came due on Monday and were not refunded plus a substantial additional

It has been charged that the big producers give breaks to their own manufacturing subsidiaries but not to inde-

In 1970, Triangle Industries Inc., en independent fabricator, sued five hig copper producers, charging them with trying to monopolize the fabricating sector. That case has not come to trial yet. There was no way of determining if it had any connection with the grand jury inquiry.

Also in 1970, the Nixon administration began an investigation into the pricing system for copper. That study focused on the disparity between prices set for copper by U.S. producers and the price on the world market.

Since then, however, the disparity has practically diseppeared. Copper in the United States is selling at 52 1/2 cents pound. On the London market it is steady in the 50-to-51-cent range. Analysts say that the change in the world price situation took the teeth out of the U.S. probe and that it seems unlikely the current grand jury investigation is linked to it.

New Confidence Seen In Rise in Dow, Trade

By Alexander R. Hammer NEW YORK, May 19 (NYT) .-The stock market made another sizable advance today in heavier trading as winners outnumbered losers by more than a two-to-one ratio on the New York Stock

Blue chips, glamours, and most other market groups shared in the broad advance that naw the Dow Jones industrial average spurt ahead 10.31 to 961.54. Yesterday the average climbed 10.08 Turnover climbed to 19.58 million theres from 17.37 million shares yesterday. Brokers attributed the continued upswing and increased in-terest in the market to the fact that investors' wariness following the new U.S. military action in North Vietnam is abating and they are again investing.

They also noted that the two-day edvance was helped by the news yesterday that corporete profits in the first quarter were up 6.5 percent to a record $91.6 billion annual rate.

Also buoying the market was investor optimism over next week's summit talks in Moscow There has been speculation that ready reached some sort of agreement on trade policies. Star Performers

The star performers were the blue-chip and glamour issues. In the blue-chip category, Kresge climbed 3 1/4 to 119 1/2, Sears, Roebuck rose 2 1/8 to 115, Union Carbide jumped 1 3/8 to 42 5/8 and Du Pont soared 4 1/4 to 167 Among the glamour issues, Corning Glass jumped 7 1/2 to 245 1/2. Texas Instruments soared 8 3/8 to 161 3/8, Xerox, which has announced it is planning to market e color copier next year, climbed 6 7/8 to 147 1/2, IBM rose 1 3/4 to 296 1/4 and Levitz Purniture was up 4 1/4 to 58. The exchange today put Levitz on 100 percent margin require-

A recommendation by a market analyst buoyed the stocks of the toy manufacturers. Mattel rose to 26 1/8 and Ideal Toy gained 1 3/8 to 35 1/2. On the American Stock Exchange, the index closed at 27.26, up 0.11. The close was 0.38 ahead of Friday e week ago. In the OTC market, the

NASDAQ industrial average closed at 141.57, up 1.78. essed about 1/8 point in Eght trading, while government intermediates firmed about 1/8 point in sporadic activity.

Fund Cash-Ins Hit Record

WASHINGTON. May 19 (Reuters).-Mutuai fund redemptions in April exceeded sales by $249.8 million, a record, the Investment Company Institute reported today.

The mutual fund association said sales totaled $405.3 million, down from $472.8 million in March. At the same time, investors cashed in $555.1 million compared with $636.5 million in March. The previous high redemption figure was $193.7 million set in March.

How to place your portfolio under investment management starting with as little as $5,000

Here are the five simple steps you take to place your portfolio under The Danforth Associates Investment Management:

1. Write us now for a 42-page booklet describing this tested plan. There is no obligation and no one will call you. We serve clients all over the world (in at least 64 countries) solely by correspondence. 2. Study our procedures and objectives. See how we will try to help your capital grow by carefully selecting and supervising your investments in leading common stocks.

Compare the 15-year "Performance Record" of all the funds we have been privileged to manage. 3. Send us a "Request Form" telling the amount of money in cash or security values you want us to manage, how you want dividends and fees handled and, if you wish, a little helpful data on your own financial plans.

4. Open your own brokerage account with a large NYSE Member Firm which, for efficiency, has a special office serving only Danforth clients. Deposit your cash and/or securities in this account and give them limited power to accept instructions from us - with all transactions to be made only in your

5. From this point on, our analysts will make decisions to try to help your capital grow as fast as possible consistent with reasonable precautions. As in any selection of investments, losses do and will occur, but you will know their decisions promptly. You receive monthly accountings and quarterly evaluations. You can withdraw at any

The plan thus far has proved, we believe, especially efficient in providing capital growth supervision to portfolios starting with from $5,000 to $50,000. To take your first step now, simply write "send booklet" with your name and address and mail to Dept. T. 6.

BOOKS

Criminals at Large

By Newgate Callendar

COMEBODY must be reading little piles of gold, thinking those novels of romantic entitled to anything we suspense, because they continue to be published, and publishers are not normally known for their philanthropy. So recently, I have been plunging deep into books in which boy (girl) meets girl (hoy), girl gets into trouble, things in the night go hump about them. at her, girl's life hangs on a thread of her silken hair, boy comes dashing to the rescue, off they go arm-in-arm forever. It pecially an education in the fine craft of writing. In Janet Gregory Vermandel's In Janet Gregory Vermandel's "Of Midnight Honor" (Dodd.

Mead, $4.95) the writing is on the order of "His thick fair hair catching the sunlight, his flashing smile and warm brown eyes..." This one is about Quebec separatists, sabotage, terrorists, mur-der. It is also about kissing. Warm and hungry kisses. And mind whispers: "Like what? whispered my mind. Oh, God. Ob, God." Oh, God.

has been an education. And es-

Tobias Wells, in "How to Kill a Man" (Doubleday, $4.95) concentrates on the cliche. One of her paragraphs is a collector's item. Here, three enormous, glit-tering clichés elbow each other for space: "After a moment she took her hand away. 'And sohaving made my bed with dirty linen. I bad to lie in it. And then I found, like mother, like daughter. The mills of the gods grind exceedingly small." Writ-ing like this is within the prov-ince of few novelists. Otherwise, the book has something to do with the murder of a famous writer, a phony writing school and other odds and ends of no conceivable interest to anybody. Equally inimitable is Elizabeth Kyle's "The Scent of Danger Rinehart & Winston, $5.95). Most of the action takes place in France, where two Isdies are searching for a perfume formula. The writing aspires to the heights of "I was such a fool..." At the end, girl and boy are united. "Serena laughed. Now the car was driving down, down into the white mist which crept in from the sea at the setting of the sun. Barney slipped his dots are hers. Beautiful writing,

There is also much beautiful writing in "A Sybaritic Death" by Alexandra Roudybush (Doubleday, $4.95): "He leaned over and kissed her, first her fore-head, then the bollow of her neck and finally her mouth, sending waves of excitement through her. Her senses reeling, she found herself returning the pressure of his lips with an intensity that matched his own."
Faced with the nuances of this kind of prose, how can anybody concentrate on a mere mystery. in which a wealthy lady is murdered in Turkey?

Also to be admired is a little passage that happens after the boy in the girl's life starts walking out. Seems that she's rich, and of course no self-respecting the time, was not a man would want to marry a rich girl. She calls him back and makes pretty talk to him as follows: "How could I have said such a thing? Please, please forgive me, Jock. You are probably right to despise rich people. We're all awful, sitting snugly on our

on our own terms!" There's of this threat-catching dia and the book ends with a h Books like this give a bad name Betty Frieds her girls should do some Evelyn Berckman's "The I Man on the Rope" (Done $5.95) poses a different ki stylistic problem. This be about a librarian, a collect people in an English in house, thievery, murder, too, offers the fool ploy, fool, what a fool she had Three fools in one short tence: not bad. But the stylistic thing about "The Man on the Rope" is the s determination never to wit said," or "She said." Preakness Position Favors Riva Ridge

By Red Smith

BALTIMORE, May 18 (NYT).-Eddie Litzenberger, who was a jockey and then a trainer and now is assistant racing secretary at Pinlico, shook a leather bottle briskly and rolled a mumbered pill on to the counter,

"One," he said.

Beyerly Zerwitz, a tall blonde in riding breeches wearing a yellow such that read "Miss Preakness," drew a sheet of paper from a file and handed it to Larry Abbundi, the racing secretary, who read out the name of the horse that would have the inside post position in the "No. 1 is No Le 97th Preskness tomorrow.

"How shout that" said Homer Pardoe, who saddled the stunning chestnut for the Kentucky Derby and saw him finish second

Led All the Way

Their coit had the ninth post in Kentucky. near the middle of the 16-horse field, yet broke on top and led all the way. Leaving from the third stall. Ron Turcotte should be able to place his mount wherever he chooses before reaching the first turn.

It was shortly after 10 a.m., the hour when owners of seven colts and two geldings bought thousand-dollar chances on the winner's purse of $137,800. (It costs $100 to nominate a horse for the Preakness, $1,000 to pass the entry box and $1,000 more to start.) Before the draw for post positions, Pardue and Laurin had shared the morning smahine ontside Barn E.

Homer Partne was born in Louisville across the street from Churchill Downs, and he could nose without makeum as the Kentucky hardboot in an ad for hourbon whiskey. Indeed, he might have been doing just that as he leaned against a post-and-rail fence squinting out from under the brim of a weathered felt hat. Beyond the fence No Le Hace was cropping grass, his red coat glowing.

After finishing second in the Derby. No Le Hace's rider, Phil Rubbleo, said his horse might have done better if there had been more early speed to soften up Riva Ridge.
"At the five-eighths pole." Pardue said. "I was about five lengths off the lead and the boy on Hold Your Peace drove et Riva Ridge. My kid saw that and waited, giving the other two a chance to bite each other up. About the half-mile pole, it seemed as if Turcotte decided to put Hold Your Peace away. He gunned Riva Rain is predicted englinge and opened up three, four more lengths ing of some outsiders.

STABLE TALK-Jockey Ron Turcotte visits his Preakness mount, Riva Ridge.

Posted at intervals along the fence are the names of the eight horses, from Sir Barton in 1919 to Citation in 1948, who won the Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes for the Triple Crown While Pardue was talking, Laurin led Riva Ridge out to graze just back of the sign Whirlaway," the 1941 winner.

The trainers swapped grins. Earlier, when No Le Hace finished his morning gallop, Partiue had told his hotwalker. "Don't walk him around the barn. Don't want him to make Riva Ridge and Key To The Mint shiver." No Le Hace had walked around the barn, and the others had oot swoomed.

'He Could Gallop'

Laurin said he had not planned a front-run-ning race in Kentucky. "I told Ronnie not to let Hold Your Peace get away. I wasn't worried Your Peace. He won four out of six with two

"This horse of yours comes from tough stocks," a man said. "I just read in the Blood-Horse that his great-great-grandmother won two stakes while she was in foal carrying this colt's great grandmother. This was a mare named Sweetheart, and her foal was by Man O' War."

Entry Even Money

BALTIMORE, May 19 .- A field of nine is ectered for the Preakness, with the entry of Riva Ridge and Upper Case rated even money to win and the odds expected to drop further at post time tomorrow. Key To The Mint is 9-5 and No Le Hace 6-1

Ray Wins 7th in Relief As Astros Nip Dodgers

LOS ANGELES, May 19 .- Reliever Jim Ray recorded his seventh, victory without a loss this season—the best pitching record in the major leagues—as the Houston Astros scored on a squeeze bunt in the 11th inning to nip the Los Angeles Dodgers here, 4-3. Ray, a spot starter and reliever with Houston since 1968, was 10-4 last season.

The winning run was uncarned as Lee May got aboard in the 11th on Bill Grabarkewitz's throwing error. Bobby Fenwick ran for May, and Bob Watson singled. With two out, Doug Rader was walked and Tommy Helms then dropped the bunt to score Fenwick, who broke for home on the pitch.

The victory kept Houston in first place in the National League's Western Division. Cubs 6, Cardinals 4

Don Kessinger drove in three runs with a pair of singles, including a two-run single in the ninth inning, to lead Chicago to 2 6-4 road triumph over St. Louis and extend the Cardinals' losing streak to eight games. Ken Rudolph hit a two-run triple in a three-run fifth inning for the Cubs as the aged Juan Pizarro picked up the victory in relief of Milt Pappas.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 2 Joe Coleman, backed by catcher Tom Haller's hitting, pitched a three-hitter as Detroit scored a 7-2 home victory over Boston. Haller led off the second inning with a triple and scored when Dick McAuliffe doubled. Haller doubled in the fifth, batting in

Koosman is Cleared NEW YORK, May 19 (NYT),-Manager Yogi Berrs of the New York Mets said yesterday that he considered the Jerry Koosman racetrack incident "closed."

Bowie Kuhn, the commissioner of baseball, added that "my in-vestigation has not indicated any wrongdoing on the part of Koosman," the pitching star of the 1969 World Series.

But Kuhn reported that he understood the Westchester County grand jury was continuing to investigate a disputed payoff on exacta betting in a race last June 7 at Yonkers Raceway.

Koosman was questioned be-cause he had been a guest at the track that night and had appeared in the paddock early in the evening. His host, Leonard Schindler, a Brooklyn clothing man and a harness-stable owner, also was questioned by the jury.

Colleges Need You

parents lived in fear that their children would not be accepted rounds of colleges and universities with their offspring, submitting to countless. interviews bу hard - faced directors of admissions, who always told them, "Don't get your hopes up." Well all this

Buchwald has changed, and most schools are desperate for students to fill their freshman class. Many colleges, are now recruiting high school graduates in the same manner they used to recruit high school athletes. I know a young man who has been applying to colleges this spring and the response has been phenomenal.

He wrote to one school asking for information and a brochure and received a response in two dsys: 'We are happy to inform you that you have been accepted in the freshman class at Zig Zag College. The school term will begin on Sept. 13. Kindly send your deposit of $500 in the enclosed self-addressed envelope."

The young man and his parents thought there was some mistake so they sent off an inquiry to another school, Lieba Tech. A week later a man showed op at the door. He said hs was an alumnus of Lieba Tech who lived in Washington, and had been asked to come over to speak to the young man about the school. The alumnus said, "You're just the kind of man Lieba has been looking for."

"What is there to know? You're a fine looking student. I can tell in college. They made the by just looking at you that you would be a credit to the school. Here, just sign the application blank. The school will bill you ·later."

"I'd like to think about it," the young man said. "Of course," the alumnus said, "this is a very important decision. Think about it and I'll call you in a couple hours."

A week later a man who said he was director of admissions of

Sara Lee University showed up st the door. "I just wanted to tell you personally how happy we are to have you as a student at Sara Lee."

"Bnt I haven't applied to Sara Lee," the boy protested. "We got your name from a spy in the Lieba Tech admissions office. You'd hate Liebs Tech. They have no student parking facilities at all." "But," the mother said, "isn't Sara Lee a girls' school?" "If your son agrees to go there, we'll make it co-ed." "Do you have a soccer team?" the boy asked. "You want a soccer team-we'll have a soccer team. You can choose your own uniform." "I smoke pot," the hoy said. "Who doesn't smoke pot?" the director of admissions asked. "Don't you even want to look at my school records?" "School records He!" the director of admissions yelled. "We want the all-around type of student who is interested in something besides studies." "I don't know what to say," the boy replied. Suddenly the director of admissions started to sob. "I don't want to beg, but I have a quota to fill. Give me a break. Come to Sara Lee. My job depends on it. I need you, boy. Why can't you understand that?"

"Please," the father said, "get off your knees. I assure you we will give Sara Lee our considera-

Jimmy Winkfield —A Winner at 92

By Helen Drusme

PARIS (IET) _At the turn of the century James Winkfield was one of the greatest jockeys in the world and later a rich American jockey and trainer in France. He is one of the few to have won the Kentucky Derby twice in a row.

Now, 92, he lives in the Paris suburb of Maisons-Laffitte, where he built a house and stables in 1924. There his Frenchborn son continues to train racehorses.

"My parents didn't want me to go with the horses, so I slipped out the back door in 1897 when I was 17 and never came back" said Winkfield who is black recounting, as if it had happened yesterday, the story of a 53-year career that took him to Russia, Poland, Germany, and France, where he finally retired in 1958 at the age of 70.

Glancing at a large photograph of Golous, the horse on which he won the Moscow Derby in 1914, wizened, 5-foot-tall, 108-pound Winkfield reminisced about his first

"It was in Chicago in 1898. Though I was just an apprentice, I came in second out of 13 riders. There were four colored jockeys and I was in fifth place at the start, I cut across to fourth place, two horses fell down and at the turn I was in third place, then I took the lead, but was caught in the finish," he said, reliving it minute by

Never straying from a straight chronological narration, he spoke of dates, names, places, and events as if turning over the pages of a book starting with his leaving home near Lexington, Ky.

He began as a stable boy, then graduated to exercising racehorses. By 1901, when he was 21 years old, Jimmy Winkfield was America's leading jockey.

"I had 220 winners that year," he said, "and won the Kentucky Derby on His Eminence. Next year I won the Derby again on Alan-a-Dale. There were a lot more black jockeys in those days. Nowadays white trainers say Negro jockeys get too fat by living it up after they get successful That's an excuse. I think there's just too much money in it now and they want to keep the Negroes out of it."

But the year of his second derby winner his luck turned. In Chicago a horse stumbled and rolled on him. It cost him three months in the hospital, four months oot of the saddle, and the next year, in 1903, an unbroken string of losing rides.

"So I got discouraged and accepted an offer to go to Russia," Winkfield said. In 1904 a U.S. newspaper headline pronounced, "Winkfield Agrees to Ride for General Lazzareff for 13,000 Rubles (about

From 1904 to 1910 Winkfield rode for Michel Lazzareff, owner of a leading Russian stable. From 1910 until 1913 he rode for Prince Loubomoiski in Vienna thenreturned to Russia to ride for oil magnate-Leon Mantacheff, one of the richest men of pre-revolutionary days. Winkfield had an apartment in Moscow; and learned to speak Russian, which he said was "very easy.

"They (the Russians) treated me fine. I was tops in Russia. Once in 1907 I won eight out of 11 races in one day, and one year I had 133 winners," hs said.

Regarding his life in Russia, he will only say "I never paid taxes," and "There was no prejudice at all in Russia, not a hit: I would have stayed but for the revolution." After more than 50 years in France, he doesn't speak French. He attributes this to his two Russian wives; the second of whom, a daughter of an emigre aristocrat, he met in Maisons-Laffitte.

The Communists put a temporary end to horse racing in Moscow in 1918. Winkfield left for Odessa on the Black Sea near Turkey to ride and train for a Polish officer. Thinking he would be back in two weeks, he left almost all he owned behind.

He took a handhag containing two extra suits, his saddles and riding gear, and $1,000 in paper bonds he soon found to be worthless. After the Communists errived in Odessa, he set off again with his family and a group of friends on horses and in wagons across the open and deserted countryside of Bessarabia to Bucharest and then to Warsaw.

Exiled oil magnate Mantacheff, who had settled in France, sent for Winkfield. He raced for Mantacheff from 1920 until he retired as a jockey in 1930 at the age of 48. "At that time I couldn't go back to America, to live because of my Russian wife," said Winkfield, adding that he never suffered discrimination in France.

It was in 1924 that Winkfield bought the property where he now lives with his 49year-old son, Robert, his son's French wife, Janine, and his two grandchildren, Therry, 7, and Betsy, 2. Originally 8.6 acres of woodland, it now comprises a villa, stables, and a garden of lilec bushes, lime and chestnut trees surrounded by stalls for 28 borses trained on a local track But in 1940 he was broke and fleeing again, this time from the Germans. Hs borrowed $800 from the American consulate in Lisbon to pay for his family's boat pas-sage to New York. He arrived with $9. He mortgaged the property he owned in Kentucky, got a job training horses in Virginia Maryland and Delaware, and once again through a stroke of luck, climbed back to the top. "A rich white woman gave her colored chauffeur a racehorse as a gift. He sold it to my son for $200. That horse turned out to be so good and won so many races, we were able to pay all our debts and set curselves op again," said Winkfield, his face lighting up. He came back to France in 1953 intending to sell the Maisons-Laffitte property and return to the United States. An owner convinced him to stay as a trainer. He wrote to his son to come help him and has been here ever since.

"I was 76 last time I rode a horse. Now sometimes I go to the races to sit in the sun and wetch the people. Of all those who knew me when I was in form there are only about two or three alive.".
